
New Book: Guidance on the community-researcher relationship, to support further scholarship and positive community change

Released: 2016
McGill-Queen's University Press

Doing Community-Based Research: Perspectives from the Field

by

Greg Halseth, Sean Markey, Laura Ryser, and Don Manson

Website: <http://www.mqup.ca/doing-community-based-research-products-9780773547285.php>

Community-based research (CBR) offers useful insights into the challenges associated with conducting research and ensuring that it generates both excellent scholarship and positive impacts in the communities where the research takes place. This depends on two important variables: the capacity of CBR to generate good information, and the extent to which CBR is understood and constructed as a two-way relationship that includes a set of responsibilities for both researchers and communities.

Offering expert advice on the crucial relationship between communities and researchers, the authors of Doing Community-Based Research outline the main stages of the CBR process to guide researchers and practitioners. They discuss the reasons for conducting CBR, provide tips on how to design research, detail how researchers and communities should get to know one another, as well as how best to work in the field, and how to turn fieldwork into research that counts. By focusing on the lessons learned from the use of CBR, the authors make the messages, lessons, and practices applicable to a variety of research settings.

Drawing collectively from decades of community-based research experience and including vignettes from researchers from around the world who share their CBR experiences, Doing Community-Based Research is an essential handbook for scholars, students, and practitioners.

Greg Halseth is professor of geography and Canada Research Chair in Rural and Small Town Studies at the University of Northern British Columbia.

Sean Markey is associate professor in the School of Resource and Environmental Management at Simon Fraser University.

Laura Ryser is research manager in the Rural and Small Town Studies Program at the University of Northern British Columbia.

Don Manson is a community-based researcher and educator working with the communities and people of northern British Columbia.

$34.95 Paperback

352 Pages 6 x 9, 2 diagrams, 3 tables

ISBN 9780773547285

Formats: Cloth, paperback, ebook

McGill-Queen's University Press 2016